The screenshot shows the 'Local Group Policy Editor' window. The left sidebar is expanded to 'Local Computer Policy' > 'Administrative Templates' > 'All Settings'. The main pane displays the 'Enable Win32 long paths' policy, which is currently set to 'Enabled'. The policy description states: 'Enabling Win32 long paths will allow manifested win32 applications and Windows Store applications to access paths beyond the normal 260 character limit per node on file systems that support it. Enabling this setting will cause the long paths to be accessible within the process.' A note at the bottom indicates that this registry setting is not stored in a policy key and is considered a preference. The right pane shows a list of other settings, with 'Enable Win32 long paths' selected. The status bar at the bottom indicates '2281 setting(s)'.
